

About BEAMA

BEAMA (British Electrotechnical and Allied Manufacturing Association) has been established for over 100 years and operates as the independent expert knowledge base and forum for the electrotechnical industry in the UK and across Europe. Representing over 300 manufacturing companies in the electrical Installation products, Energy and Power sectors, the organisation has significant influence over UK and International political, standardisation and commercial policy.

The BEAMA Anti-Counterfeiting Working Group (ACWG) was formed in 2000. Its objective is to take action against counterfeiters making counterfeit electrical installation products, and the traders who distribute them into the UK and many international markets, including those in the Middle East and Africa, which form an important part of our members' export business. It has achieved global recognition for its proactive work and receives cooperation from trade associations around the world.
