

Early Years Entitlement for 3 and 4 year olds

How you can get help with the cost of childcare

The 10 Year Childcare Strategy 2004 sets out plans to create early learning and childcare services which:

- help every child develop to their full potential
- help parents get back into work
- allow parents to make informed choices about their children's care and their family life.

What is the Early Years Entitlement?

From the term after your child's third birthday until they start school, they are entitled to up to 15 hours of free early learning and child care each week for up to 38 weeks a year during school term time. The hours can take place in nurseries (including school nursery classes), playgroups, pre-schools or at certain childminders. Some out of school clubs will also be able to offer part of this entitlement.

The full 15 hours must be used over at least 3 days a week and you can use a minimum of 2.5 hours and a maximum of 10 hours a day between 8am and 6pm. A maximum of 12.5 hours if the entitlement is needed over only two days. You can also share the 15 hours between two providers. Ask your childcare provider how they are offering the 15 hour entitlement.

How will this benefit my family?

- Free early learning and care gives your child a head start when they go to school. Singing songs, playing games with letters and numbers and having fun with other children help to prepare your child for school and for life ahead.

- The learning and experiences your child has when being cared for help to shape them and their development.
- A Department for Children, Schools and Families (DCSF) survey of parents using the Early Years Entitlement found that parents:
 - were overwhelmingly positive about the effect of early years education and care on their child
 - saw a range of benefits in their child such as improved social and communication skills, access to a wide range of activities and increased cultural awareness
 - said that they benefited from using the entitlement - just under half said that access to free childcare meant that they were able to work.

When can my child have their entitlement?
