

A unique resource for teachers addressing issues of racism, mixed heritage, cultural stereotyping and bullying, based on real-life experiences. Students' book, teachers' book and cd-rom. Suitable for work with late Key Stage 2 and Key Stage 3.

This innovative resource will:

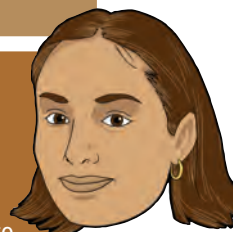

Help students to explore sensitive issues based on real-life experiences of mixed heritage families.

Enable students to engage with the multi-cultural characters and consider their views using up-to-date language and contexts.

Enable students to address bullying around race, religion and culture, how to prevent it and what to do when it happens.

Give students the opportunity to explore racist stereo-typical views and reflect on their own experiences and actions.

Skin Deep

The many links to Social and Emotional Aspects of Learning (DCFS, SEAL*) materials help consolidate ideas and lead students to a deeper level of consideration of the everyday issues encountered by mixed heritage families.

Use this beautifully illustrated book and interactive website www.skin-deep.org.uk to meet the characters and look at their backgrounds. "...it helps to discuss it (race and ethnicity) frankly, not recite clichés from newspapers nor retain an anxious silence. Courage is undoubtedly needed, not least the courage to make mistakes, but the challenge of diversity will not be met in schools who hide in cultural and racial blindness as a solution" Gaine, C. (2006) We're All White, Thanks Trentham Books.

The cd-rom included with the teacher notes booklet provides printable worksheets, clip art and a copy of the website.
