

A Partisan's Daughter by Louis de Bernieres

Set in London during the Winter of Discontent, A Partisan's Daughter deals with the relationship between Chris, an unhappily married, middle-aged Englishman and Roza, a young Serbian woman recently arrived in London. As Roza tells her story, she draws him into her world and he comes to understand her journey from a childhood as the daughter of one of Tito's partisans to her life in London. It's a book about the power of storytelling and a compelling, moving and unlikely love story.
